ETSC's Conference on Best Practice in Transport Safety

2004

October

27

In spring 2003 the European Commission published its 3rd Road Safety Action Programme. It identifies more than 60 individual measures – that is more than 60 stepping stones in reaching the EU target of halving road deaths by 2010.

A good year after the adoption of this far-reaching European road safety strategy and only a few months after the accession of 10 new member states, ETSC's annual conference takes a closer look at the implementation of some key road safety measures at member state level.

The conference features examples of "good practice" from both the leading EU countries in terms of road safety as well as the less well performing. Particular emphasis is given to countries of what we have termed the SEC Belt (Southern, Eastern and Central European Countries), since these countries reveal the greatest potential in improving their road safety policies.

By attending, help us increase understanding about what works and why, and forge new links between professionals across Europe.
